

SUPERGENIOUS

Passion: Your area of Genius will be characterized with enthusiasm, intense interest, and fun. It will be difficult to turn off your energy when working in your genius, and you will rarely be tired of working in it. If you do experience a sense of fatigue, it will be accompanied by a powerful sense of satisfaction.

Rapid and Continuous Learning You will notice that learning new information takes little time. New concepts are easily visualized and quickly integrated into your existing knowledge base. The learning process in your Genius is fun, and never-ending improvement comes naturally.

Strong Memory Facts, figures, dates, names, conversations, and key points related to your Genius are characterized by a vivid, clear, and perfect memory.

Flow You will become totally immersed in what you are doing. Often called "in the zone" you will totally shut everything out.

Using Intuition You will be able to naturally tap into and be inclined to follow your natural hunches....and most importantly be right! Expect to experience strong, instinctual knowledge that helps you make quick, positive decisions to move you toward your goal.

Absence of Burnout Since you will be doing what you do best and love to do, you will get more done in less time and be happier, healthier, and more balanced. Burnout is the mental, emotional, and physical consequence of overwork in an area of weakness or non-Genius. Burnout is the breaking point of accumulated resistance to non-Genius activity.

Yearning: When you experience a deep desire that won't go away, it is a strong sign that you are approaching your Genius. No matter how often or how deeply you try to bury it, Your Genius will keep emerging until you do something about it. Your Genius is longing to be released once and for all.

The Wing-it Factor: Have you ever attempted something, completed it with very little effort or preparation and then received tremendous feedback and praise? If you can "wing it" and get great results, how much better could you do with a little more preparation and practice? One of the biggest performance mistakes people make is continuing to "wing-it" because they can, rather than investing the time and effort to make it to the top 1%.
